OBJECTIVE OF THE SEMINAR

Sustainable development is development that meets the needs of the present without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs. Sustainability addresses the ability of societies to maintain and improve quality of life while preserving both the quality and availability of its natural resources. The task of maintaining sustainable development is vital and urgent, and demands innovation, creativity and other traditional engineering skills, alongside an ability to work with many other disciplines involved. It also requires a new view of the world, and a preparedness to adopt new ways of working and thinking about the impacts into the future –negative as well as positive, of their actions.

The challenges faced by Civil Engineers in sustainable development are to make their contribution to society to:

- Reduce the adverse environmental and social aspects of development
- Improve their environmental performance and contribution to a high quality of life
- Help society to move towards a more sustainable lifestyle, and
- Ensure that products, services and infrastructure meeting these criteria are competitive in the market place.
